ABOUT THE PROJECT

So much has been said and written about the genesis of the artistic/musical ferment that took place in metropolitan area of New York City in the 1920s and '50s, a period which is commonly known as "The Golden Age".

In the last seventy, eighty years every aspect of this movement has been the object of studies, conferences and debates. Therefore only with difficulty would any fresh attempt at analysis prove reason for interest.

By contrast, we thought it useful to create a tool that would present in an astute and appropriate way all the early signature elements of this unique artistic/musical and social/urban context so that they might trigger new insights, offer original avenues to be explored.

To that end, we collected two types of data: o that end, we collected two types of data:

A) the number and the identity of the musicians who, during the period considered, either by profession or simply by artistic vocation usually performed in public. In selecting the musicians to include we limited ourselves to this sole latter criterion. For every musician we also indicated the instrument and / or role that he or she played.

B) the name and the address of the music venues where they performed (from theaters to public spaces, from public and private auditoriums to cocktail lounges, restaurants and bars, from houses of worship to all other types of gathering place used for musical performances).

Both types of data were listed in alphabetical order.

In this way, while respecting all methodological rules, new useful information can be obtained. For example: For example:

- the correlation coefficient between ethnic origin and type of instrument or role played;
- the relation between gender and the instrument or role played;
- the existence or not of family connections among the musicians included in our list.

ABOUT THE PROJECT

As to the venues, it would be equally easy to calculate, for instance, their geographic concentration by city area by city area and / or as a whole.

The specific type of urban structure or space and the main type of performance held there are among other pieces of information we may find pertinent.

To ensure optimal use of this book for reference purposes, readers should keep the following in mind:

• the musicians include all types: instrumentalists, vocalists, choral singers, arrangers, orchestra conductors, conductors of any other genre of music group, composers, lyricists;

• next to the musician's personal data we specify the type of instrument(s), form and style of singing, and / or particular role (arranger, conductor, composer, lyricist) for which that musician made his or her name. Apart from some uncommon instruments, all the others are indicated by the relative abbreviations found in the explanatory table located at the start of each of the alphabetical sections (organized on the basis of musician's surnames);

• next to the name of some musicians is written the term "unspecified"; this is true in cases where the musicians were members of instrumental groups (bands and orchestras) for which the sources we used did not specify the type of instrument played;

• all information re both musicians and venues appears exactly as we found it in the sources we used;

• some pages of this book were illustrated with parts of popular 1920s and'50s advertising drawings, appropriately updated by the Author;

Despite our keen attention to detail in writing this book, organizing our data in alphabetical order and then doing our best to properly fact-check it, there may still be discrepancies. We are sorry about this and kindly ask you to point out to us any such discrepancy and / or misinformation you might note, by contacting us as indicated on the second additional page at the front of the book.

ABOUT THE PROJECT

We will take care to make all necessary corrections, and to respond promptly to any request for further information and/or assistance.

Also, we would like to say that in reference to the musicians' basic personal data we preferred to use, where possible, original names and terms. All the same, we did not fail to mention any nickname they may have had back in their day.

We organized our research data manually: that is, without using any type of software program. We chose this approach so as to best simulate the way people worked during the historical period on which our book pivots.

This volume 3 contains the name of 10,342 musicians for a total of 68,972 items of information.

We added an appendix with a selection of their photos 191 portraits in all.

In conclusion, to these introductory notes, we note, however, how all the information made easily accessible will stimulate the memory of many men and women united by their different musical sensibilities.

ABOUT THE PROJECT

So much has been said and written about the genesis of the artistic/musical ferment that took place in metropolitan area of New York City in the 1920s and '50s, a period which is commonly known as "The Golden Age".

In the last seventy, eighty years every aspect of this movement has been the object of studies, conferences and debates. Therefore only with difficulty would any fresh attempt at analysis prove reason for interest.

By contrast, we thought it useful to create a tool that would present in an astute and appropriate way all the early signature elements of this unique artistic/musical and social/urban context so that they might trigger new insights, offer original avenues to be explored.

To that end, we collected two types of data:

A) the number and the identity of the musicians who, during the period considered, either by profession or simply by artistic vocation usually performed in public. In selecting the musicians to include we limited ourselves to this sole latter criterion. For every musician we also indicated the instrument and / or role that he or she played.

B) the name and the address of the music venues where they performed (from theaters to public spaces, from public and private auditoriums to cocktail lounges, restaurants and bars, from houses of worship to all other types of gathering place used for musical performances).

Both types of data were listed in alphabetical order.

In this way, while respecting all methodological rules, new useful information can be obtained. For example:

- the correlation coefficient between ethnic origin and type of instrument or role played;
- the relation between gender and the instrument or role played;
- the existence or not of family connections among the musicians included in our list.

ABOUT THE PROJECT

As to the venues, it would be equally easy to calculate, for instance, their geographic concentration by city area by city area and / or as a whole.

The specific type of urban structure or space and the main type of performance held there are among other pieces of information we may find pertinent.

To ensure optimal use of this book for reference purposes, readers should keep the following in mind:

• the musicians include all types: instrumentalists, vocalists, choral singers, arrangers, orchestra conductors, conductors of any other genre of music group, composers, lyricists;

• next to the musician's personal data we specify the type of instrument(s), form and style of singing, and / or particular role (arranger, conductor, composer, lyricist) for which that musician made his or her name. Apart from some uncommon instruments, all the others are indicated by the relative abbreviations found in the explanatory table located at the start of each of the alphabetical sections (organized on the basis of musician's surnames);

• next to the name of some musicians is written the term "unspecified"; this is true in cases where the musicians were members of instrumental groups (bands and orchestras) for which the sources we used did not specify the type of instrument played;

• all information re both musicians and venues appears exactly as we found it in the sources we used;

• some pages of this book were illustrated with parts of popular 1920s and'50s advertising drawings, appropriately updated by the Author;

Despite our keen attention to detail in writing this book, organizing our data in alphabetical order and then doing our best to properly fact-check it, there may still be discrepancies. We are sorry about this and kindly ask you to point out to us any such discrepancy and / or misinformation you might note, by contacting us as indicated on the second additional page at the front of the book.

ABOUT THE PROJECT

We will take care to make all necessary corrections, and to respond promptly to any request for further information and/or assistance.

Also, we would like to say that in reference to the musicians' basic personal data we preferred to use, where possible, original names and terms. All the same, we did not fail to mention any nickname they may have had back in their day.

We organized our research data manually: that is, without using any type of software program. We chose this approach so as to best simulate the way people worked during the historical period on which our book pivots.

This volume 4 contains the name of 15,324 musicians for a total of 84,296 items of information.

We added an appendix with a selection of their photos 259 portraits in all.

In conclusion, to these introductory notes, we note, however, how all the information made easily accessible will stimulate the memory of many men and women united by their different musical sensibilities.

ABOUT THE PROJECT

So much has been said and written about the genesis of the artistic/musical ferment that took place in metropolitan area of New York City in the 1920s and '50s, a period which is commonly known as "The Golden Age".

In the last seventy, eighty years every aspect of this movement has been the object of studies, conferences and debates. Therefore only with difficulty would any fresh attempt at analysis prove reason for interest.

By contrast, we thought it useful to create a tool that would present in an astute and appropriate way all the early signature elements of this unique artistic/musical and social/urban context so that they might trigger new insights, offer original avenues to be explored.

To that end, we collected two types of data:

To that end, we collected two types of data:

A) the number and the identity of the musicians who during the period considered, either by profession or simply by artistic vocation, usually performed in public. In selecting the musicians to include we limited ourselves to this sole latter criterion. For every musician we also indicated the instrument and/or role that he or she played.

B) the name and the address of the music venues where they performed (from theaters to public spaces, from public and private auditoriums to cocktail lounges, restaurants and bars, from houses of worship to all other types of gathering place used for musical performances).

Both types of data were listed in alphabetical order.

In this way, while respecting all methodological rules, new useful information can be obtained.

For example:
- the correlation coefficient between ethnic origin and type of instrument or role played;

-the relation between gender and the instrument or role played;

- the existence or not of family connections among the musicians included in our list.

ABOUT THE PROJECT

As to the venues, it would be equally easy to calculate, for instance, their geographic concentration by city area by city area and/or as a whole.

The specific type of urban structure or space and the main type of performance held there are among other pieces of information we may find pertinent.

To ensure optimal use of this book for reference purposes, readers should keep the following in mind:
- the musicians include all types: instrumentalists, vocalists, choral singers, arrangers, orchestra conductors, conductors of any other genre of music group, composers, lyricists;

- next to the musician's personal data we specify the type of instrument(s), form and style of singing, and/or particular role (arranger, conductor, composer, lyricist) for which that musician made his or her name.

Apart from some uncommon instruments, all the others are indicated by the relative abbreviations found in the explanatory table located at the start of each of the alphabetical sections (organized on the basis of the musicians' surnames);

Next to the name of some musicians is written the term "unspecified"; this is true in cases where the musicians were members of instrumental groups (bands and orchestras) for which the sources we used did not specify the type of instrument played;

All information re both musicians and venues appears exactly as we found it in the sources we used;

For ornating the pages of the letters of the alphabet that introduce the lists of names of the musicians included in this survey is a selection of unusual scenes in photographic form, almost all shot by Wm. Gottlieb, which belong to the public domain.

Despite our keen attention to detail in writing this book, organizing our data in alphabetical order and then doing our best to properly fact-check it, there may still be discrepancies.

ABOUT THE PROJECT

We are sorry about this and kindly ask you to point out to us any such discrepancy and/or misinformation you might note, by contacting us as indicated on the second additional page at the front of the book.

We will take care to make all necessary corrections, and to respond promptly to any requests for further information and/or assistance;

Also, we would like to say that in reference to the musicians' basic personal data we preferred to use, where possible, original names and terms. All the same, we did not fail to mention any nickname they may have had back in their day.

We organized our research data manually: that is, without using any type of software program. We chose this approach so as to best simulate the way people worked during the historical period on which our book pivots.

This volume 5 conteins the name of 10,573 musicians for a total of 88,432 items of information.

We added an appendix with a selection of their photos 259 portraits in all.

Following this fifth and latest volume will be update notebooks to contain, among other things, the names of additional musicians, photographs, and further pertinent information.

Please note that thanks to these new publications the number of musicians we will learn the identity of reaches a total of more than 125,000.

Once our work is completed we will be sure to have provided information on the social and artistic history of New York City that's both useful and interesting.

About the Project

(Abstract)

So much has been said and written about the genesis of the artistic musical ferment that took place in metropolitan area of New York City in the 1920s through '50s, a period which is commonly known as "The Golden Age".

In the last seventy, eighty years every aspect of this movement has been the object of in-depth study, conferences and debates. Therefore only with difficulty would any fresh attempt at analysis prove reason for interest.

On the contrary, we thought it was useful to create a tool that could make known all the fundamentals of music and urban context present in metropolitan area of New York City during the period we considered.

To that end, we collected two types of data:

A) the number and the identity of the musicians who during the period considered, either by profession or simply by artistic vocation, usually performed in public. In selecting the musicians to include we limited ourselves to this sole latter criterion. For every musician we also indicated the instrument and /or role that he or she played;

B) the name and the address of the music venues where they performed (from theaters to public spaces, from public and private auditoriums to cocktail lounges, restaurants and bars, from houses of worship to all other kinds of gathering place used for musical performances).

The data presented in volumes 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5 (for a total of 88,432 musicians and 6,347 venues) there will be more to more to come.

Please, note that thanks to the Supplements the estimated number of musicians we will learn the identity of reaches a total of more than 125,000.

Once our work is completed we will be sure to have provided information on the social and artistic history of New York City.

About the Project

(Abstract)

So much has been said and written about the genesis of the artistic musical ferment that took place in metropolitan area of New York City in the 1920s through '50s, a period which is commonly known as "The Golden Age". In the last seventy, eighty years every aspect of this movement has been the object of in-depth study, conferences and debates. Therefore only with difficulty would any fresh attempt at analysis prove reason for interest.

On the contrary, we thought it was useful to create a tool that could make known all the fundamentals of music and urban context present in metropolitan area of New York City during the period we considered.

To that end, we collected two types of data:

A) the number and the identity of the musicians who during the period considered, either by profession or simply by artistic vocation, usually performed in public. In selecting the musicians to include we limited ourselves to this sole latter criterion. For every musician we also indicated the instrument and /or role that he or she played;

B) the name and the address of the music venues where they performed (from theaters to public spaces, from public and private auditoriums to cocktail lounges, restaurants and bars, from houses of worship to all other kinds of gathering place used for musical performances).

The data presented in volumes 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5 (for a total of 88,432 musicians and 6,347 venues) there will be more to more to come.

Please, note that thanks to the Supplements the estimated number of musicians we will learn the identity of reaches a total of more than 125,000.

Once our work is completed we will be sure to have provided information on the social and artistic history of New York City.

About the Project

(Abstract)

So much has been said and written about the genesis of the artistic musical ferment that took place in metropolitan area of New York City in the 1920s through '50s, a period which is commonly known as "The Golden Age". In the last seventy, eighty years every aspect of this movement has been the object of in-depth study, conferences and debates.

Therefore only with difficulty would any fresh attempt at analysis prove reason for interest.

On the contrary, we thought it was useful to create a tool that could make known all the fundamentals of music and urban context present in metropolitan area of New York City during the period we considered.

To that end, we collected two types of data:

A)the number and the identity of the musicians who during the period considered, either by profession or simply by artistic vocation, usually performed in public. In selecting the musicians to include we limited ourselves to this sole latter criterion. For every musician we also indicated the instrument and /or role that he or she played;

B)the name and the address of the music venues where they performed (from theaters to public spaces, from public and private auditoriums to cocktail lounges, restaurants and bars, from houses of worship to all other kinds of gathering place used for musical performances).

The data presented in volumes 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5 (for a total of 88,432 musicians and 6,347 venues) there will be more to more to come.

Please, note that thanks to the Supplements the estimated number of musicians we will learn the identity of reaches a total of more than 125,000.

Once our work is completed we will be sure to have provided information on the social and artistic history of New York City.

About the Project

(Abstract)

So much has been said and written about the genesis of the artistic musical ferment that took place in metropolitan area of New York City in the 1920s through '50s, a period which is commonly known as "The Golden Age". In the last seventy, eighty years every aspect of this movement has been the object of in-depth study, conferences and debates.

Therefore only with difficulty would any fresh attempt at analysis prove reason for interest.

On the contrary, we thought it was useful to create a tool that could make known all the fundamentals of music and urban context present in metropolitan area of New York City during the period we considered.

To that end, we collected two types of data:

A)the number and the identity of the musicians who during the period considered, either by profession or simply by artistic vocation, usually performed in public. In selecting the musicians to include we limited ourselves to this sole latter criterion. For every musician we also indicated the instrument and /or role that he or she played;

B)the name and the address of the music venues where they performed (from theaters to public spaces, from public and private auditoriums to cocktail lounges, restaurants and bars, from houses of worship to all other kinds of gathering place used for musical performances).

The data presented in volumes 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5 (for a total of 88,432 musicians and 6,347 venues) there will be more to more to come.

Please, note that thanks to the Supplements the estimated number of musicians we will learn the identity of reaches a total of more than 125,000.

Once our work is completed we will be sure to have provided information on the social and artistic history of New York City.

About the Project

(Abstract)

So much has been said and written about the genesis of the artistic musical ferment that took place in metropolitan area of New York City in the 1920s through '50s, a period which is commonly known as "The Golden Age". In the last seventy, eighty years every aspect of this movement has been the object of in-depth study, conferences and debates.

Therefore only with difficulty would any fresh attempt at analysis prove reason for interest.

On the contrary, we thought it was useful to create a tool that could make known all the fundamentals of music and urban context present in metropolitan area of New York City during the period we considered.

To that end, we collected two types of data:

A)the number and the identity of the musicians who during the period considered, either by profession or simply by artistic vocation, usually performed in public. In selecting the musicians to include we limited ourselves to this sole latter criterion. For every musician we also indicated the instrument and /or role that he or she played;

B)the name and the address of the music venues where they performed (from theaters to public spaces, from public and private auditoriums to cocktail lounges, restaurants and bars, from houses of worship to all other kinds of gathering place used for musical performances).

The data presented in volumes 1, 2, 3, 4 and 5 (for a total of 88,432 musicians and 6,347 venues) there will be more to more to come.

Please, note that thanks to the Supplements the estimated number of musicians we will learn the identity of reaches a total of more than 125,000.

Once our work is completed we will be sure to have provided information on the social and artistic history of New York City.

About the author

Pietro Fanara was born in Palermo in 1946.

He earned two degrees from the University of Palermo, first one in Political Science, then one in Statistics.

Since 2003 he has been the director of the IDIOMI international book-shop in Palermo, where he has set up a section devoted specifically to music publishing and to foreign language books.

Basically, The "Golden Age" in New York City consists of an in-depth historical research on the music scene in the metropolitan area of New York City during the period 1920s - 1950s.

In particular, this research, excepting all methodological constraints, makes available, all in one, the identities of more than 125,000 musicians and the name and address of 6,347 venues where public musical events were held.

Once our work is completed we will be sure to have provided information on the social and artistic history of New York City.
